Email Marketing Sequence

Name : Angel Londhe

Portfolio Piece 04 : Welcome Series and Cart Reminder

Brand concept and copy

Paithani Lane

The brand	Handwoven Paithani sarees, bought directly from weaving families in Yeola, Maharashtra, and sold online.
Price	₹18,000 and above. This is never an impulse buy.
Who's reading	Women between 28 and 55, in India and abroad. Usually shopping for a wedding, and often choosing together with a mother or a daughter.
The ask	Two welcome emails for new subscribers and one cart reminder. No discounts.

The sequence at a glance

Email 1, Day 0	Make her feel something before she sees a price. Bring back the memory of a saree kept safe in the family.
Email 2, Day 3	Show the hands behind the saree. One weaver, one pallu, one story she'll want to share.
Email 3, Cart	Hold the door open gently. No pressure, just a reminder and a real person to talk to.

All three are written to be read on a phone in under a minute. Short lines, one button, and the name of a real person at the end.

> The thinking behind it. Nobody spends ₹18,000 on a saree because of a product description. They spend it because of a feeling, a wedding, a memory, a person they want to look beautiful for. So the first email opens with a memory almost every Indian family shares, and the second one puts a real face behind the saree. The cart reminder has no discount, because a handmade piece loses its value the moment it goes on sale. Instead, it offers what a buyer at this price really needs: time, honesty and someone to talk to.

Email 1 : Welcome

Subject	Some sarees are bought. Some are passed down.
Preview	We're happy to see you at Paithani Lane.
From	Snehal at Paithani Lane

Namaskar,

Think of the saree your aaji kept wrapped in a soft cotton cloth, right at the back of the cupboard.

The one that came out only for weddings. The one that smelled of naphthalene and old perfume. The one she said would be yours one day.

That's the kind of saree we make room for.

Every Paithani here is woven by hand, by families in Yeola who have been doing this for generations. Some take three weeks. Some take a whole year. Each one comes to you with a card, signed by the person who wove it.

See the collection

Shopping for a wedding? Just reply with the date. We'll help you find the one.

With love,
Snehal

Second subject line to test: "The saree in your aaji's cupboard"

Email 2 : The weaver

Subject	She wove this peacock from memory
Preview	Forty seven days. One pallu.
From	Snehal at Paithani Lane

This is Sunanda tai.

For forty seven days, she sat at her loom before the sun came up, working on a single pallu. A peacock in deep green and gold, its feathers spread wide.

We asked her where the design was. She smiled, tapped her forehead and said, "It's all in here."

Every thread of that peacock was tied in by her hands. That's why a real Paithani looks just as beautiful on the back as it does on the front.

Somewhere, there's a bride who will wear it. And maybe one day, her daughter.

See Sunanda tai's saree

Second subject line to test: "47 days, one peacock"

Email 3 : Cart reminder

Subject	It's still waiting for you
Preview	We've kept it aside for two days.
Sent	24 hours after a saree is left in the cart

Hi Priya,

The green Paithani you were looking at is still here. We've kept it aside for you for the next two days.

There's only one of it. Once it finds a home, it won't come back.

If something made you pause, just reply to this email. We can send you a video of the saree in daylight, help you with easy monthly payments, or check if it will reach you before the event.

Go back to your saree

Take your time. Some choices deserve it.

Snehal